

From: radioriley@juno.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/27/02 7:18am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

My view of a computer operating system is that of an automobile;
How the car works - engine, brakes, etc., is up to the manufacturer.
But the accelerator is always expected to be operated by the right foot and found to the right of the brake pedal.

In other words, the consumer is not obliged to hire a chauffeur provided by the manufacturer who knows where all the operating lever are secretly located.

J. David Riley <radioriley@juno.com> Ph: 941-747-8125

Bradenton FL 34212-2783